

There would appear to be no justification to preventing satellite radio from keeping subscribers as fully informed as possible. Information includes news and commentary as well as weather and traffic information. Since many of us use a satellite service in our automobiles to avoid the inanities inflicted on us by most local programming, it would seem obvious that we need and can benefit from straightforward traffic info on demand. It is refreshing to get information when we need it rather than when somebody else decides that it fits their broadcast schedule. Let us benefit from the subscription that we pay for.
